

“It’s only through the act of caring for others that we find our true purpose in the world.”

— Kiran Yocom, Seniors Helping Seniors® Co-founder

Who We Are

Seniors Helping Seniors® Atlanta Southwest is a non-medical home care agency with a unique, heart-centered approach. We thoughtfully match active, compassionate mature adults with seniors who could use a hand. By considering shared hobbies, experiences, and interests, we create meaningful connections that feel more like friendship than caregiving—which often eases the transition to in-home care. Our mission is to make everyday life brighter and more manageable through the power of caring human connections.

The Seniors Helping Seniors® Difference

At Seniors Helping Seniors® in-home care services, we believe care feels more like companionship when it's delivered by someone who truly understands. That's why our unique peer-to-peer model is the cornerstone of our success. Our compassionate caregivers bring not only experience but also empathy, creating meaningful connections that go beyond basic support—because sometimes, the best care comes from a friendly face who's walked a similar path.

The Story Behind Seniors Helping Seniors®

Seniors Helping Seniors® in-home care services was founded in 1998 by Kiran and Philip Yocom in order to realize Kiran's personal mission of providing care for those who can't for themselves. Before coming to the United States from India, Kiran worked with Mother Teresa for 14 years. From our roots in Pennsylvania, and our first match in 1998, Seniors Helping Seniors® in-home care services has grown to include hundreds of locations in the US and internationally.

Built on Love, Backed by Service

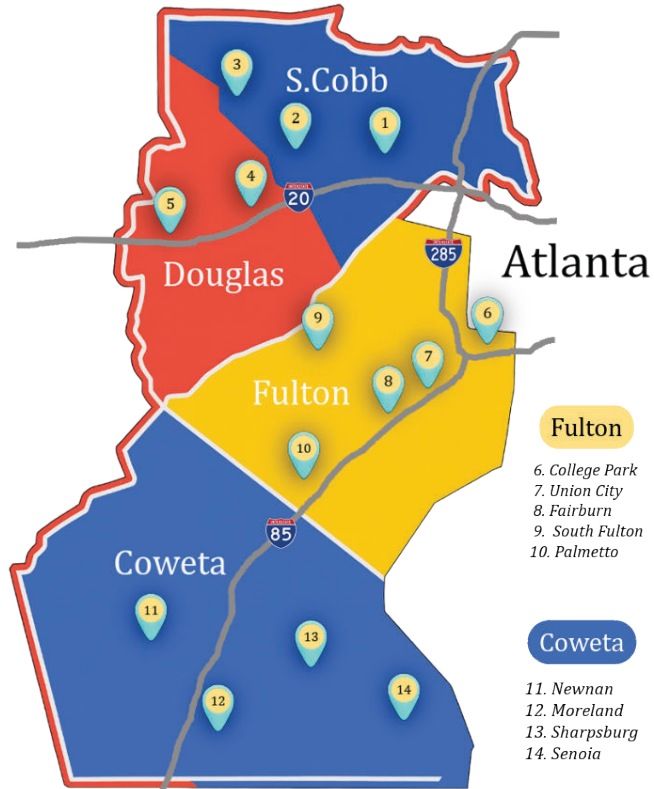

Shanticleer and Erica Graham, a devoted husband-and-wife team, brought their passion for service home to Southwest Atlanta after decades in healthcare, project management, and military service. Inspired by their caregiving mothers and a shared desire to make a difference, they launched Seniors Helping Seniors® Atlanta Southwest—a business rooted in compassion, purpose, and community care.

Together, the Grahams are creating real impact across Douglas, Fulton, Coweta, and Cobb counties. Their mission: to empower older adults through meaningful support and connection, delivered by active seniors who understand their needs firsthand. For Shanticleer and Erica, this work is deeply personal. It's a way to honor their values, uplift their community, and ensure every senior has the chance to age with dignity and joy.
